

Prevention, Intervention, and Action: The Colombian National Police and the Security of Children

The Center for Communication, Culture, and Change is proud to welcome General William Salamanca, Director of Protection and Special Services (DIPRO) for the Colombian National Police to the School of Communication on Thursday, April 2nd.

General Salamanca will address the issue of commercial sexual exploitation of children and discuss what the Colombian National Police are doing to counter this problem.

General Salamanca will be joined by School of Communication Assistant Professor Lien Tran, Doctoral Student Jessica Wendorf and FIU Journalism and Mass Communication Associate Professor Maria Elena Villar to talk about their intervention, Por Nuestras Calles, that will help both law enforcement personnel and child victims alike.
